MEMORANDUM FOR ALL USCENTAF ASSIGNED COMMANDERS, ACCes, AND DCFACC

FROM: USCENTAF/CC

SUBJECT: Revised General Order #1 (GO-1B)

1. Attached is the revised USCENTAF General Order #1 (GO-1B). It is published on the unclassified web page and posted on the SIPRnet to the Commanders' Dashboard. Its most significant change from the previous edition (GO-1A) is in paragraph 2.n., expanding the prohibition on visiting sleeping quarters of the opposite sex to apply to all such quarters, not just quarters of other Air Force members.
2. This important tool remains effective only if you, the commanders of USCENTAF, implement it. Fully enforce this important command tool when and where it is appropriate. You will find me standing alongside you with my complete support.
3. Taking care of our people who execute the combat mission is a critically important job; they are our most precious resource. Ensuring a disciplined force is the best way to instill rigorous attention to the details of training, tactics and techniques of warfare. That kind of attention keeps our combat Airmen alive.
4. I also commend you to know the complex organizations that make up USCENTAF. Our relationships with our sister services and our coalition partners are so important to a cohesive combat effort. Implementing GO-1B in this complicated C2 structure may involve challenges, not only because allies are not bound by CENTCOM's GO#1, but also because the other USCENTCOM service components do not enforce that combatant command order in the same way that GO-1B implements it.
5. Finally, I charge you with knowing GO-1B, cold. Your command chiefs and subordinate commanders need to know it as well. It is a command and control enabler, as well as a vehicle for you and your key staff to lead by example. I encourage exchanges among you on the ways and means that you use to implement the order, especially if you decide to issue written guidance on your expectations of the commanders and members of your wings.
6. Contact me if you have questions on this.
